

Picture 1 (Feet in box): The problem here is that when your feet are cold, there isn't anything to quickly warm up just your feet. This is being solved by putting your feet into a box that has warm, hot water inside, which instantly starts heating your feet.

Picture 2 (Lying on the box): The problem here is that some people have very wide frames where a normal pillow would actually cause discomfort when lying down. This issue is being solved by elevating the pillow so that it fits, but also keeping the comfort of a pillow.

Picture 3 (Staring at the box): The issue here is that people get bored when they have free time or when they don't have anything to do. This is being solved, as it is like a display for projecting a video or movie.

Picture 4 (Hands on the box): The problem here is that some people naturally look down when looking at a screen. This is being solved by making the computer screen actually tilt and adjust to someone's liking.
